[...]heat and in winter s snow, the children going and returning from school, were wont to meet poor Graffam, a short man, with sandy hair, carrying an ax upon his shoulder, and bearing in his hand a small pail of dinner; for Graffam, when refused employment by others, usually found something to do at Motley s Mills, which were about half a mile from the village. Sad and serious-looking was this poor man in the morning, and neither extreme civility nor extreme rudeness on the part of the school children could procure a single word from him at this time of day. Not thus at evening. Let us run after Graffam, and have some fun, the boys would say on returning home; and then it was wonderful to see the change which had been wrought in this mournful-looking, taciturn man of the morning. Sometimes he was in a [...].
