THE ROLE OF LOCAL TRADITIONAL ACTORS IN NATIONAL GOVERNANCE PROCESSES DURING CONFLICT

GRIN Verlag Dez 2014, 2014. Taschenbuch. Book Condition: Neu. 297x210x1 mm. This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Essay from the year 2008 in the subject Sociology - Political Sociology, Majorities, Minorities, grade: 1,0, University of Basel (Institut für Soziologie), course: Seminar: Governance, power and politics: the role of non-state actors, 6 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: In the social sciences the state is theoretically defined as a political association with effective sovereignty over a delimited territory. It is an institution or a set of institutions which have been invested with a legitimate monopoly over the means of physical violence to exercise authority over both its territory and the population resident therein. Furthermore it is also in control of the monopoly of taxation as well as the monopoly of setting and enforcing rules and regulations that are binding for every citizen (Lambach 2007: 33). Therefore no political authority can exist above it. Usually the state exercises the monopolies by itself or by agents who act on its behalf, but it can also legitimize private acts of violence, taxation or rule setting. It happens, however, that a state has certain difficulties to implement its rules, to collect taxes or to enforce its monopoly of violence. When it faces this kind of deficiency a state is described as weak . When it is unable to exercise authority and its monopolies it is labelled as a failed or even as a collapsed state. Since the beginning of the 1960s cases of state failure occurred almost always in the so called Third World, and here most likely in Africa (in fact 15 of the 24 cases or nearly two thirds happened in Africa). That also European states can fail showed the example of Bosnia Herzegovina from 1992...
