He was for ever pestered by the interviewer and the writer Of paragraphs, and to these, up to the last day of his strength, he never learned to say nay. Often when the interview came Off it was a surprise to the interviewer. He found awaiting him a tall, boyish figure, with an Old-fashioned hatchet face, crowned by hair that hung in a waterfall over a high forehead. From the large mouth, with the sharply protruding chin, a cigar was never absent, and the kindly grey eyes were lighted by a pleasant smile Of welcome which no importunity could dissipate. But the interviewer found also that this somewhat sinister youth - for May remained a youth always - With his quaint contradictions Of geniality and his odd likeness to Leo XIII, had an inveterate habit Of modesty and reticence, and could not, under any circumstances, be made to talk about himself. Ready to turn out portfolios and cabinets. Eager enough to praise the work of a fellow-artist, he had no snippet personalities to divulge, although quick with a nod Of smiling affirmation to any suggestion of personal history which might be fathered upon him. It followed that the interviewer, with his page or his column to fill, had to supplement this meagre interview with a...
