GENERAL SUMMARY The year as a whole averaged warm and dry as compared with the records of the past thirty-nine years. Only four of these years have been warmer than 1914, and the warmest year, 1900, had a temperature 1.1 higher. The year was unusual, as the temperature was above normal, except in February and December. The deficiency was small in February but was large in December; in fact, December was the coldest month of...
